SCIENCE SESSION: The Language of Science for Infants and Toddlers

You don't need to wear a white lab coat to be a scientist. For infants and toddlers, science is a part of their natural curiosity and exploration. Training materials promote natural exploration and scientific discovery. You will learn strategic ways to engage infants and toddlers in science and key methods for incorporating scientific language in your program or classroom. Come prepared to push your current understandings of science and learn ways to encourage the next generation of scientists.

Scott Liebler: Funsical Fitness Keeps Children Moving and Improving

Children will develop the majority of their fundamental motor skills and attitudes about physical activity between the ages of 2-10. Through repetition and a progressive sequence of developmentally appropriate activities, a child can easily build the strength, balance, endurance, character, confidence and coordination they need to develop above average physical abilities. This workshop will introduce you to a simple 5-step format of activities to share with your children.
